TORONTO FILM FESTIVAL

Yoshi Takahashi, an acclaimed concert pianist, lives opposite the Toronto home of two young sisters. His arrival into their lives changes things forever. Less groupies than frolicsome teenagers, they watch and document his every move, planning how to attract his attention. As the girls grow up their relationships with the pianist become more complicated, emotionally charged and erotically explosive.

A few years later when the family has moved to a wealthy neighborhood, the sisters, now sophisticated women, learn of Yoshi's concert in town. A family reunion becomes more than just a celebration when Jean discloses what she knows about Yoshi's love affair with her sister and confronts her with unsuspecting consequences. Based on the best selling novel 'A Certain Mr. Takahashi' by Ann Ireland the film depicts the journey of two women from childhood to womanhood through conflicting desires, betrayal and ultimately bitter sweet love.
